A landmark book explaining the best CR instruments available and distilling their most valuable elements for the reader. It is a fully revised third edition covering human rights, labour rights, environmental management, corruption, corporate governance and gender equality.

With a new Foreword by Sir Mark Moody-Stuart, Vice Chairman of the UN Global Compact, the book also includes how-to (or process) codes focusing on reporting, stakeholder engagement and assurance.

Praise for previous editions:

An invaluable practical guide which will be useful not only to the corporate world, but to all concerned with this issue.

Sir Geoffrey Chandler, Founder Chair, Amnesty International UK Business Group 1991-2001, and former Director of Shell International

This is confusion-busting guidance at its best.
Jonathon Porritt, Forum for the Future

A mammoth piece of work... I am sure companies and others who operate within this complex field will find it very useful.

Deborah Smith, EQ
Management Ltd

This excellent review provides more clarity and greater understanding for all interested parties about the current state of play in codes of conduct.

Dominique Bé, European Commission

[It] will become the key reference guide for executives and boards of directors seeking to become socially responsible.

Alice Tepper Marlin, President and CEO, Social Accountability International

The Corporate Responsibility Code Book promises to make a contribution to rectifying one of the most vexing problems facing business and its stakeholders: bringing order, understanding and value to the complex landscape of principles, norms, standards and guidelines.

Allen L. White, Co-Founder and Special Advisor, Global Reporting Initiative; Vice President, Tellus Institute

A well-written and powerful book for anybody who is serious about corporate social responsibility.

Arco ten Klooster, PricewaterhouseCoopers, Sustainability Solutions, the Netherlands

[It] offers not only excellent tools in the field but also challenging perspectives on ways ahead consolidating the thousands of codes and guidelines.

Jens Erik Lund, Operational Director, OECD
LEED Trento Centre
